It's no secret that makeup can help to play up your best facial features. But Philadelphia aestheticians insist that eyebrows are another, more subtle secret weapon in enhancing your visage. Just like cosmetics, the key is finding what looks best for you.

"Properly shaped brows bring balance and proportion to the whole face," says Victoria Roggio, a veteran makeup artist who works her magic at Rescue Spa's new Walnut Street location (Medical Arts Building, 1601 Walnut St., 215-772-2766; rescuespa.net). "In general," she says, "larger features look better with slightly fuller eyebrows, whereas smaller features are balanced by thinner eyebrows." Roggio, who recommends tweezing brows to ensure the exact shape desired, notes that most Philadelphia women prefer natural-looking brows. "Adding a slight arch opens up the eyes," says Adolf Biecker Spa/Salon's Kin Sy, who likens a good brow shaping to a face-lift (1605 Sansom St., 215-735-6404; adolfbiecker.com).

But when considering which shape is best for you, trending styles are not necessarily the way to go. "Don't pay too close attention to trends like bushy versus fine lines," says the recently opened Bellevue Salon and Spa's Harriet Goldman, who has worked with stars like Jennifer Lopez and Jill Scott (The Hyatt at The Bellevue, 200 S. Broad St., 267-514-8000; belleuvesalonandspa.com). "A clean arch and a well-groomed brow is always in style." She suggests getting them waxed regularly then following the established line when tweezing at home. "It's all about that line, and when it's gone, get it reestablished by an expert."

Regardless of which method you favor, Sy stresses the value of beginning with a thorough, professional shaping. "Our brows are our best feature, so no matter if you tweeze, wax, or even thread, the important thing is to find the right shape." PS
