On a gorgeous Saturday in June, this bride and groom made it official with a modern yet glamorous celebration at the James A. Michener Art Museum.

ELIZABETH BROWN and Zachary Herr first met in the fall of 2016, but it's likely their paths crossed well before that: They grew up just 10 minutes away from one another in New Hope. The stars finally aligned when Zach's sister, who happens to be one of Lizzie's closest college friends, introduced them. The connection was instant—and 5 ½ months after their first date, they agreed to forever.

Family has always been at the core of their relationship, and their wedding day at the James A. Michener Art Museum was no different. The bride's aunt planned the entire occasion, bringing to life the couple's vision of an all-white modern fete that complemented the venue. Then, in front of their nearest and dearest, Lizzie's cousin pronounced them husband and wife.

As guests danced the night away—pausing only to snack on Philly-inspired desserts like water ice and Krispy Kreme doughnuts—the bride couldn't help but soak it all in. “There was one moment when I looked around the dance floor to catch my surroundings,” she says. “Seeing how happy everyone was, how much everyone was enjoying the event, made me so happy.” The perfect ending to such a joyous, family affair: Hitching a ride home with Lizzie's mom and dad. ■
