

THE REST IS HISTORY

Before former Eagles cheerleader Julia DePaul and Michael DiNapoli toasted their newlywed status at the historic Union League of Philadelphia, they spent their preceremony festivities at another local, albeit little-known, landmark:

Al Capone's former summer home. The 36-acre Pine Hill, N.J., estate, which the notorious mobster used as a speakeasy and hideaway in the late 1920s, has been in the bride's family for decades and proved to be an idyllic setting for the couple's prewedding photos and festivities. "We chose to make the estate a part of our wedding day because, aside from the special meaning it holds for us, the grounds around the estate offered a scenic backdrop for our photos that seemed fresh and unexpected," says the bride. With its romantic European-style courtyard, lush landscaping and expansive lake views—which photographer Amy Rizzuto expertly captured during Julia and Michael's first look—the sprawling property certainly delivered. "The green gardens surrounding the lake and the home created a picture-perfect setting for capturing some of our favorite moments with our bridal party." —Alexandra Leshner
